Whitehall, November 16.

THE Letters, of which the following are Copies and Extract, from the Right Honourable General Elliott, Governor of Gibraltar, were received on Thursday last at the Office of the Right Honourable Thomas Townshend, His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Gibraltar, September 15, 1782.

MY LORD,
THE Enemy having collected his whole Force by Sea and Land; Forty-four Sail of the Line, besides Three inferior Two Deckers; Ten Battering Ships, Five Bomb Ketches, several Frigates and Xebecques, a great Number of Gun and Mortar Boats, a large Floating Battery, many Armed Vessels, and near Three Hundred Boats, purposely constructed for carrying Troops: Their Land Batteries mounted with above One Hundred Pieces of Cannon, and an equal Number of Mortars and Howitzers:
An Army near Forty Thousand Men:
On the 13th Instant, at Eight in the Morning, all the Battering Ships, commanded by Don Buenaventura Moreno, Rear-Admiral, were put in Motion, and came forward to the several Stations previously determined they should take up: The Admiral being placed upon the Capital of the King's Battalion, the other Ships extending Three to the Southward of the Flag, as far as the Church Battery, five to the Northward, about the Height of the Old Mole; and One a very little to the Westward of the Admiral; by a Quarter before Ten, they were anchored in Line, at the Distance of a Thousand to Twelve Hundred Yards: Immediately a heavy Cannonade began from all the Ships, supported by the Cannon and Mortars in the Enemy's Lines and Approaches: At the same Instant our Batteries opened with hot, and cold, Shot, from the Guns, and Shells from the Howitzers, and Mortars. This Firing continued, without Intermillion, on both Sides, until Noon, when that of the Enemy from their Ships seemed to slacken, although but little. About Two o'Clock the Admiral's Ship was observed to smoke, as if on Fire, and a few Men busy upon the Roof, searching for the Cause. Our Batteries never discontinued: The Enemy's Fire from the Ships gradually decreased. About Seven in the Evening they fired from a few Guns, and that only at Intervals. At Midnight the Admiral's Ship was plainly discovered beginning to burn; an Hour after it was compleatly in Flames: Eight more of the Ships took Fire in Succession. Signals of Distress being now made, the Launches, Feluccas, and Boats of the whole Fleet, began to take out the Men from on Board the burning Ships. Many Shot were still fired from those in which the Flames had yet made no considerable Progress; and the Fire from the Enemy's Batteries on Shore did not in the least diminish. Brigadier Curtis, who, with his Squadron of Gun Boats, lay ready to take Advantage of any favourable Circumstance, left the New Mole at Two o'Clock, and about Three formed a Line upon the Enemy's Flank, advancing and firing with great Order and Expedition, which so astonished and disconcerted the Enemy, they fled precipitately with all their Boats, abandoning the Ships, in which some Officers and Numbers of their Men, including many wounded, were left to perish.

This

This unavoidably must have been their wretched Fate, had they not been dragged from amidst the Flames by the personal Intrepidity of Brigadier Curtis, at the utmost Hazard of his own Life, a Life invaluable to His Majesty's Service. For some Time I felt the utmost Anguish, seeing his Pinnace close to one of the largest Ships at the Instant she blew up, and spread her Wreck to a vast Extent all round. The back Cloud of Smoke being dispersed, I was again revived by the Sight of the Pinnace, little apprehending that the Brigadier was in the utmost Danger of sinking, some Pieces of Timber having fallen into, and pierced the Boat, (killing the Coxswain, and wounding others of the Men) scarce any Hope left of reaching the Shore: Providentially he was saved by stopping the Hole with the Seamen's Jackets, until Boats arrived to their Relief.—One of our Gun Boats was sunk at the same Moment.

In the Course of the Day the remaining Eight Ships severally blew up with violent Explosions; one only escaped the Effect of our Fire, which it was thought proper to burn, there being no Possibility of preserving her.

The Admiral's Flag remained flying on Board his Ship, 'till she was totally consumed.

Your Lordship will be pleased to inform His Majesty, that the Royal Artillery Additional Gunners and Marine Brigade only could be employed on this Service, which they executed with the deliberate Coolness and Precision of School Practice, but their Exertion was infinitely superior. The Fire was incessant, and the Batteries abundantly supplied with Ammunition; every Soldier in the Garrison, not on Duty, eagerly pressing to share in the honourable Labours of the Day. The Enemy's daring Attempt by Sea was effectually defeated by the constant and well-supported Fire from our Batteries; but the well-timed, judicious and spirited Attack made by Brigadier Curtis, rendered this Success a compleat Victory.

The Enemy's Loss, Killed, Burnt, Drowned, and Wounded, must have been great indeed.

I inclose a List No. 1. of the Ships destroyed; No. 2. of Prisoners taken, all by Brigadier Curtis, except One Spanish Officer with Eleven French Soldiers, who out of Four-score escaped on the Wreck of their Boat. Two large Launches from the Fleet were taken with the Officers and Men belonging to them. The sincere Gratitude all the Prisoners of War expressed for their Deliverance from the various Horrors that surrounded them, afforded the highest Satisfaction to Humanity.

I am happy to say, my Lord, that notwithstanding the Enemy's violent Effort, our Loss has not been great in Numbers; yet such gallant Individuals must be ever regretted.

Captain Reeves, of the Royal Artillery, was the only Officer killed, and is much to be lamented for his Knowledge and constant unwearied Attention to every Duty. Our wounded Officers will all do well; and we are hopeful not to lose many of the Soldiers.

The Duke de Crillon, a General of the highest Reputation, having the Chief Command of the Allied Forces, Princes of Royal Blood of France, Dignified Characters of Europe, First Nobility of Spain, and Great Military Officers, being present with the Besieging Army, an amazing Concourse of Spectators, that filled the Camp, and covered the adjacent Hills on this Occasion, induce us to believe, the Combined Powers had formed the most sanguine Expectations of Success from their Battering Ships, deemed perfect in Design, compleated by dint of prodigious Labour, and unlimited Profusion of Expence; and, by common Report, pronounced invincible.

I am, MY LORD, with Respect,
Your most obedient and most humble Servant,

To the Earl of Shelburne, G. A. ELIOTT.
Esq. &c. &c.

N. B. The Substance of the Lists of the Ships destroyed, and Prisoners taken, referred to in the above Letter, has already been printed in the Gazette Extraordinary of the 8th Instant.

MY LORD,

THE Publick Dispatches will be delivered by Captain Vallotton, my First Aid de Camp, who is sufficiently well informed to answer any farther Particulars your Lordship may wish to have minutely explained.

Captain Vallotton is an active, intelligent, and zealous Officer: If His Majesty is graciously pleased to bestow any Mark of Favour upon him, I am sure he will never prove undeserving.

Extract of a Letter from Lord Viscount Howe, Admiral of the Blue, Esq. &c. &c. to Mr. Stephens, dated on Board the Victory, off St. Helen's, the 14th of November, 1782.

IN Addition to the Contents of my last Letter of the 24th, I am to inform you, that as soon as the Masts of the Ships, damaged by the Enemy's Fire, were properly secured, the first Opportunity was taken (on a light Breeze from the N. E. succeeding the Calm which intervened) to stand to the Northward the 22d at Night, under all the Sail possible, with requisite Care for keeping the Fleet duly connected, to get up again with the Enemy.

The Wind continuing in the same Quarter 'till the 25th, and more Easterly the Three following Days, the same pressed Sail was carried as before; but as the Enemy, who had persisted to avoid a Renewal of the Action of the 21st, could not (as the Wind since remained) be forced thereto, except by working in with the Barbary Shore for an uncertain Time, which the State of the Ships in many Respects did not admit, I brought the Fleet to, on the 28th, to prepare the Detachments directed by my Instructions at that Period.

Extract of a Letter from Hugh Pigot, Esq. Admiral of the Blue, Esq. &c. &c. to Mr. Stephens, dated on Board the Formidable at New York, the 9th of October, 1782: Received November 16, 1782.

Warwick, at Sea, September 22, 1782.

S I R,

I HAVE the Honour to inform you, that in the Evening of the 11th some strange Vessels were discovered from on Board His Majesty's Ships Lion and Vestal, which were chased in Consequence of my Signal, and occasioned our Separation. On the Morning of the 12th Five Sail were seen from off the Deck; Two were to Windward, whose Appearance led me to think they were Enemies; the Three to Leeward, I have every Reason to believe, were His Majesty's Ships under my Orders; these Circumstances induced me to chase to Windward: About Seven in the Morning I was joined by the Bonetta Sloop; Captain Keats informed me that the Ships to Windward were Men of War, and had declined to answer the private Signals which he had offered to them the Night before. Thus joined we continued the Chase, tacking occasionally until Nine, when a Third Ship stood across from the Eastward, shewing Signals unknown to me, and firing Guns; so soon as he found the Signals were not answered he changed his Course, as I did my Chase; this latter being the nearest and Leewardmost, at Twelve o'Clock the Chase hoisted French Colours, and soon after struck; it was the Sophie, from Bayonne to Philadelphia, with a Cargo on Board, armed with 22 Nine-Pounders, 104 Men, completely fitted for War, and quite new. From the Prisoners I learnt, that the Sophie had parted from L'Aigle and Gloire, Two French Frigates, having a Brig under their Convoy for America; and that the Frigates had many Passengers of Rank on Board, with a large Sum of Money. By this Time the Lion and Vestal were at no great Distance; I sent an Officer to desire Captain Fooks to use every Effort to gain the Delaware, and there to anchor in such a Situation as would most effectually prevent the Enemy from entering; and that I would follow in His Majesty's Ship the Instant the Prisoners were shifted: At this Time the Wind was out of the River, blowing strong. On the 13th at Daylight the Enemy were seen at Anchor without Cape Henlopen Light-House, with His Majesty's Brig Raccoon in Company, their Prize; the Signal was made to chase; the Enemy weighed and ran into the River.

At this Instant the Wind shifted to the Eastward, which enabled the Warwick and Vestal to weather them. Being thus cut off from the proper Channel, it remained only for the French Commodore to determine whether he would bring to and engage a superior Force, or attempt finding a Passage among the Sand Banks called the Shears, where His Majesty's Ships, by Reason of their drawing more Water, might not be able to follow them: He chose the latter, and ran up the false Channel, where I did not hesitate to follow, for though the Risk was great, the Object was considerable. Unfortunately neither of the King's Ships had a Pilot; here the Enemy had an Advantage, as I am well informed the Pilot of the Raccoon had not Honesty enough to resist the Offer of 500 Louis d'Ors, and that he took Charge of their Ships. About Twelve o'Clock I was obliged to anchor on Account of shallow Water, and was joined by the Lion, Bonetta, and Sophie Prize Ship: The Enemy anchored at the same Time. The Boats of the Squadron were ordered out to sound, and the Bonetta, Captain Keats, to go a-head and lead in the best Water. In this Manner we kept sailing and anchoring, as Circumstances permitted, until the 15th, the Enemy all this Time retiring with the same Precautions. At Three in the Afternoon the Signal was made to weigh; soon after the Enemy were under Sail, evidently in great Confusion, changing their Course frequently on Account of shallow Water. About Six in the Evening, the Bonetta made the Signal for being in shallow Water, and very soon after to anchor immediately, which was done in Four Fathoms and a Half. A Boat came on Board to inform me, that it was impossible to advance further; however, to counterbalance this Mortification, we had the Satisfaction to see the largest of the Enemy run a-ground and stick fast. I sent Mr. Lock, First Lieutenant of the Warwick, with Orders to Captain Fox, of the Vestal, and Captain Keats, of the Bonetta, that they should run upon each Quarter of the Enemy, as near as possible, and attack. Mr. Lock, after having delivered my Orders, was directed to take Command of the Sophie, now furnished with 150 Men from the Warwick and Lion, and join the Attack. In Justice to these Officers, I must acknowledge that my Orders were put in Execution with a Celerity and Address that does them Credit. The Vestal ran a-ground close on the Starboard Quarter, the Bonetta within Two Hundred Yards on the Larboard Quarter; and the Third Ship placing herself under the Stern, the French Commodore found himself obliged to surrender, on the Vestal's beginning to fire, not having a Gun to bear on any of our Ships; thus owing to the good Conduct of the Captains and other Officers employed on this Service, and the Activity of Men, was L'Aigle of Forty Guns, the finest Frigate ever sent forth from Europe, taken Possession of for His Majesty. She was commanded by Comte La Touche, bearing a broad Pendant, an Officer of great Reputation, and, if I may be allowed an Opinion, who made great Exertions to extricate himself from his Difficulties; he cut away the Masts and bored the Bottom before she struck. L'Aigle mounts Twenty-eight Guns on the Main-Deck, Twenty-four Pounders, and Twelve Nine Pounders on the Quarter-Deck and Forecastle, with upwards of 600 Men on Board. The Baron Viominil, Commander in Chief of the French Army, Mons. La Va de Montmerancy, Duke Lausun, Viscount de Fleury, and some other Officers of Rank, escaped on Shore in the same Boats which took away a great Part of the Treasure; Two small Casks and Two Boxes have fallen into our Hands; the Gloire drawing less Water than L'Aigle got up the River. So soon as the King's Ships were got off the Ground, and in Safety, every Body was employed to save the Prize, which with much Labour, under the Management of Captain Fooks, was effected on the 17th. On the 20th, in running down the Bay, I observed Two Brigs, who had been prevented from getting up the River, in the Act of Landing their Cargoes. I ordered the Vestal to dislodge the the People on board, and send the Boats to burn them, which was done.

I have the Honor to be,
With great Respect, &c.
G. K. ELPHINSTON.

Admiral Pigot.

P. S. The Racoon's Ship's Company are all re-taken in the Aigle, except the Pilot, who escaped in a Boat with some French Officers; all the Guns are British-cast, the Ship only Two Years old, very lately coppered; she is longer than the Warwick, upwards of 1200 Tons, as I am informed.
